Your website, after our meeting

Hi Jamie, here’s where the website stands after our meeting. I’ve worked through the notes we agreed on, using Alex Harrison’s site as the style reference. The look is calmer and greener, it opens on plant photography, and your headshot is back in its circle. A few things need your input before launch; they’re listed on the last page.

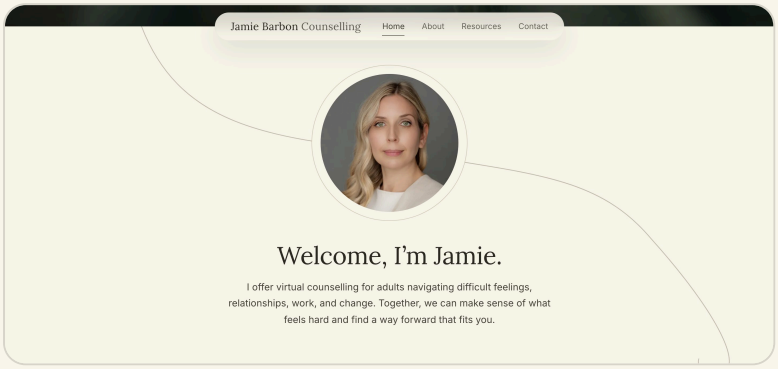

The new home page: a full-width plant photo, a centred header and the shorter tagline.

Meeting notes and status

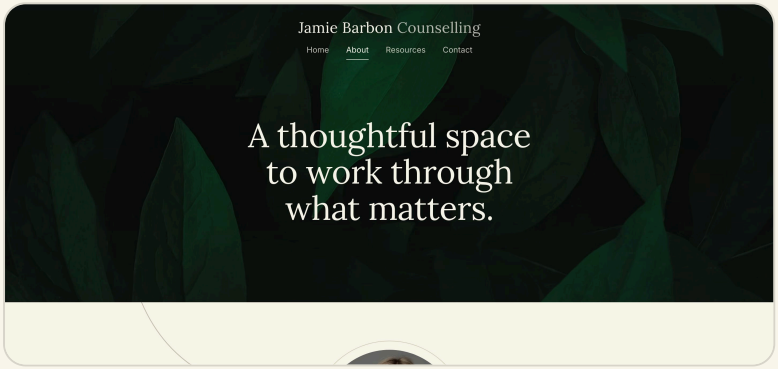

From the meeting	What changed	Status
Minimal, calm style	Simplified page tops and more breathing room, following Alex Harrison’s site.	Done
Greenery stock photos, no people	Every page now opens with a plant photo. The seated portrait on the home page has been removed.	Done
Circular headshot with divider line	Brought back on the Home and About pages. The line draws itself as you scroll.	Done
Home, About, Contact, Resources/FAQ	New Resources & FAQ page with six common questions and crisis support contacts.	Please review
Shorter tagline, smaller font	Now reads “Meet life’s challenges” at a smaller size. A softer second line follows: “With clarity, compassion, and purpose.”	Please confirm
Centred, floating header	The header sits centred at the top. When you scroll, it shrinks into a small floating bar. On phones it becomes a compact bar with a Menu button.	Done
Fonts	The serif and sans-serif pairing is unchanged. We’ll revisit it once the logo is placed.	Unchanged
Copy review	Waiting on your highlighted changes. No full rewrite, as agreed.	Your turn

A closer look

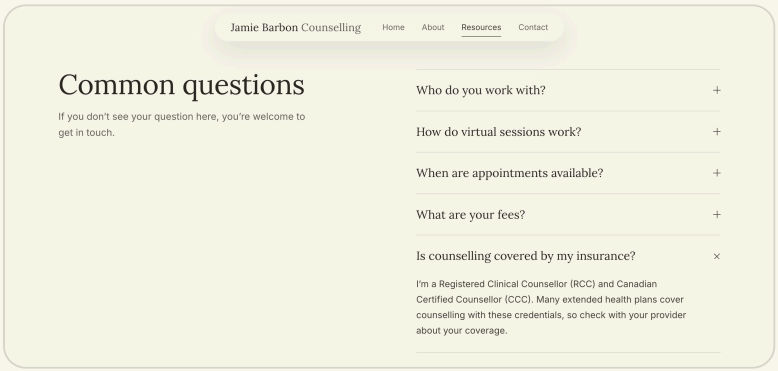

Your headshot and welcome

Just below the home page header, your headshot sits in a circle with a fine line flowing through the section. As soon as visitors scroll, the header turns into a small floating bar, so the menu is always within reach.

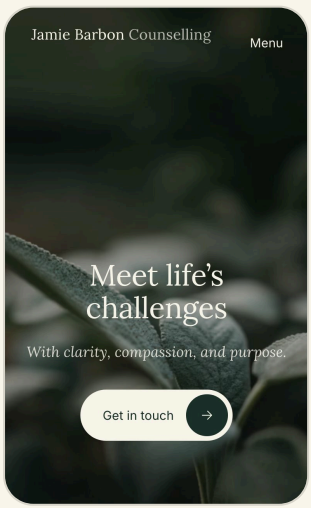

About page

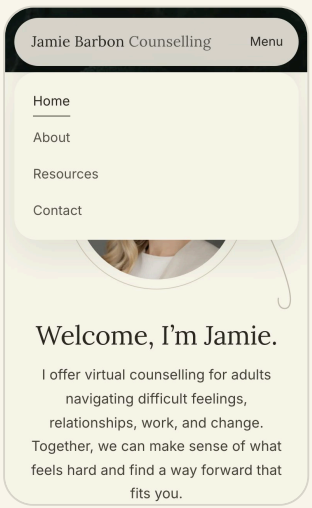

Each page now opens the same way: a dark plant photo with the page title on top. The About page then leads straight into your headshot and introduction.

Resources & FAQ

Visitors can click a question to open its answer. Below the questions are 24-hour crisis lines (9-8-8, the Vancouver Island Crisis Line and 911), which work as tap-to-call links on phones.

On phones

The same calm layout scales down to phones. Tapping Menu opens a simple list of pages, which closes again when you tap anywhere else.

I've tested every page on desktop and mobile. That covered the menu, the FAQ and the scroll effects, plus moving through the site with a keyboard.

What I need from you

1. Copy changes, highlighted. Go through each page and highlight the specific words or sentences you'd like changed, with your preferred wording next to them.
2. FAQ answers. I drafted these from what's already on the site. Please check the insurance answer and the "first session" answer in particular, and let me know of any questions you'd like added.
3. Tagline second line. Keep "With clarity, compassion, and purpose." under "Meet life's challenges", change it, or remove it?
4. Photos. Are you happy with the soft leaf direction? If any photo doesn't feel right, tell me which page and I'll swap it. Many images on your Pinterest board are paid prints, so I'd find properly licensed photos in the same style.
5. Logo. Send it over when it's ready. We'll fine-tune the fonts once it's on the page.
6. Contact email. The Contact page says your email is being set up. Once your Hushmail address is ready, I'll add it across the site.

Next steps

- Apply your copy and FAQ changes.
- Add the logo and review the fonts alongside it.
- Connect your contact email.
- Final review together, then launch.
